Background: I have been a doctor for 20 years. Since I became a Consultant, I worked for several years in Bristol Children's Hospital. I came across to South Wales to take on the challenge of set up and development of the Emergency Department at the new hospital.

Role includes: I'm heavily engaged in training the doctors of the future. Part of my role is to train them and prepare them so that the consultants of the future are practicing to a high standard.

"I love my job. The reason I love it is because it is so challenging. I see a very wide range of things and no two days are ever the same. I like meeting and interacting with children and their parents, and hopefully improving their condition when they arrive at the hospital."
