

The following information aims to provide you with details you need to know in regards to Home Burial.

You may request the release of your tiny baby (sometimes referred to as fetus/remains) for burial in your own garden. This is legal; however, there are strict regulations in place for the burial of any form of human tissue in a domestic environment.

For burials outside a cemetery the following requirements must be met.

- It must not cause any danger to others
- It must not interfere with any rights other people may have on land.
- There must be no danger to water supplies or water courses.

Please note; Fetal tissue must be buried at a depth of at least 18 inches and permission must be obtained from the land owner.
